

ABOUT THE INVENTOR

NOXO was invented by Dr. V. Ruth Pinney, a director of Adoodle, Inc. and a special consultant for NOXO who is focusing on olfactory perception altering technologies. She directs the development of new and advanced products for the company, which may have a material effect on human biological functions and neurological systems responses.

Dr. Pinney is a retired Commander of the US Naval Reserves. She served in Naval Control of Shipping and was assigned to mobilization sites in Chile, Diego Garcia British Territories and the Republic of South Korea. She also served in the Office of Naval Research (ONR) as the science advisor for Eastern Europe and as an Environmental Health Officer.

Dallas Burn Center Research Director:

It definitely helps the staff with the smells we encounter from the burn victims. The family of the burn victims are also helped.

Homicide Detective US:

I brought it to an especially gross autopsy. Every one around me was uncomfortable from the smells. I was fine. They finally noticed that I was not reacting to the smell. The ME asked for the salve. Then all of them asked for it.

Detective from Canada:

Entering a home I noticed that the flies were trying to get out of the house- I knew this one would stink. A lady had died a few days earlier. The heat in the house was on. I decided to try this under the nose salve.

When I approached the body all I could smell were the cookies on the table. Everybody else was retching from the smell.

Medical Examiner NYC 9/13:

I need more. When the delivery came to our building, the first responders intercepted the box for the field. Our examiners need them also.

NYPD Police Commissioner:

Please send as many as you can.

Paramedic:

It's great for gastric bleeding vomit. That's the one thing I can't stand.

SWAT LA:

It can block smells that would "gag a maggot".

Journalist:

I couldn't stand to visit my mother in the nursing home because of the smells. They were sickening. I was introduced to your product by a law enforcement agent. It worked! Thank you so much.
